- Determine where, how and when physical therapy protocols are best delivered to optimize functional outcomes in the pre- and post-operative management of the total joint replacement patient
- Describe the critical preoperative optimization steps to develop a plan to ensure risk stratification, standardized preoperative process, and communication of findings to reduce postoperative medical complications
- Discuss the indications and contraindications for total ankle replacement in patients with advanced painful arthropathy of three main etiologies: primary, post-traumatic and secondary
- Describe the emerging field of robot-assisted orthopedic surgery and the potential for improvements in surgical planning, accuracy of component implantation and patient safety
- Review criteria used by physicians to determine TJR risk assessment of patients with moderate to severe chronic hip or knee pain
